

STEVEN WHITE PHOTOGRAPHIC WORKSHOPS

“Control Your Camera... Control Your Outcome”

About the class:

We are a very hands-on school so you will learn by doing! We believe that having fun and keeping engaged is the best way to learn. This class is great if you're a total beginner or an intermediate. We get right to the nuts and bolts of photography, the same principals that I use, every time I take a photograph, whether it's corporate, portraiture, landscape, fine art, or just shooting for myself! You will learn how many of the different styles and effects that you often see and aspire to create are done, simply by how you control your camera relative to conditions. We will be shooting everything in manual mode to drive these principals home. This format lets you advance your level at your own pace, so even if you have taken this class before, you can pick up right where you left off so that you can always take your photography to the next level!

You will also learn some great basics on composition, storytelling, shooting in RAW mode, post-processing's role, and many other supporting principals of great photography. The first step is to demystify the camera and what it's actually doing so that you can handle all kinds of situations to get the great photographs that you have always desired!

What to bring:

You will need your Dslr camera and a tripod, any tripod will work but as sturdy as possible would be best. You will also need a simple cable release or a remote trigger. It's also good to have a long and a short lens, or a zoom lens that has both. If you have any questions about your equipment, please contact me.

Wear clothing appropriate for the weather and it's usually wise to come prepared for changing conditions with a layering strategy. Sometimes we'll go out for part of the class, and sometimes the entire class will be outdoors or on location.

The first class will be primarily indoors with a short exercise outdoors near the studio.

Cost: Just $135... for six weeks!
